ATTACK ON STONINGTON.

Extract of a letter dated N. London Aug. 10.

"The country here is much alarmed—The militia are marching, a brigade having been ordered immediately to this place. I saw some of the companies...they appeared to be in high spirits, and determined to defend the land of steady habits to the last. I heard the guns throughout last night. It was the bombardment of Stonington; they continued to echo through the woods till 8 o'clock this morning. I saw a gentleman who came from Stonington, who informs me that the people at Stonington, had made a gallant defence. The force of the enemy is 174, 2 frigates and a brig—The enemy threw many hundred rockets, most of them over-reached the town, but some of them set fire to the houses which were much damaged. Many buildings were destroyed by shot. I understand no shells were thrown. A British barge in attempting to approach the shore was sunk by shot from one of the 18 pounders and all on board perished.

Frequent attempts were made to land, by the British in barges, but they were always successfully repelled by the gallant Yankees. The force at Stonington is but 218 prs.; having fired all last night, their ammunition became expended, and teams started from this place this forenoon at eleven, to carry powder and ball. The next attack it is supposed will be here. The people seem to be much alarmed, expresses are flying in every direction to give notice of the enemy. The defence of Stonington is allowed to be the most gallant affair that has happened during the war—Three or four of the inhabitants were wounded by the shot, but I understand no person was killed. The expedition is commanded by com. Hardy. Four or five horses were killed. They expect this night there will be hot work. However, preparations are making for the worst."
